e) Factual Statement: Both this lawsuit and Snitko v. United States originated with the government's March 22, 2021, raid of U.S. Private Vaults (USPV), a private safe-deposit box company that operated in Beverly Hills, California. Snitko is a class-action lawsuit about whether the Fourth Amendment permitted the government to open and search the safe-deposit boxes. This case centers on obtaining a remedy for the two individual Plaintiffs, who stored personal property in their safe-deposit box at USPV that was lost after the government took custody of it during the raid. The cases therefore involve different legal theories and different forms of relief, and they challenge different aspects of the government's USPV raid. The two cases will nevertheless involve some factual overlap regarding the execution of the raid and the conduct of the ensuing searches.
